Seven Out of Every 10 People Are Far-Sighted.

In other words their eyes are too short from the front or cornea back to the retina. Rays of light cannot focus without eye-strain in far sighted eyes.

Most children are born far-sighted, and as they start school quite young before their eyes have had time to grow into normal condition, they are overtaxed, which results in permanent (Hyperopia, or) far sight.

This far-sight causes severe eye-strain, headaches and other nervous symptoms.

We have made special study of these conditions and can give full relief by correctly fitting lenses to focus the rays of light on the back of the eye without strain.

When the print blurs or you have headaches, have us examine your eyes.
